Home / Introduction from our CEO

Horizon Scandal pages

"When I became Chief Executive in September 2019, I was clear that the Post Office needed to apologise for events of the past and fully address them."

Righting the wrongs of the past

The Horizon IT scandal had devastating consequences on the lives of people affected. I have met and heard first-hand the moving testimonies from some of the victims and I am in no doubt about the human cost.

The Government's statutory Inquiry, led by Sir Wyn Williams, will determine what went wrong in the years following the introduction of the original Horizon IT system in 1999. Post Office is openly and transparently assisting the Inquiry's work to help provide, as far as possible, closure for those affected.

The future our Postmasters and customers deserve can only be fully delivered with the resolution of past events. That's why I established a dedicated team in the Post Office – the Remediation Unit – to address compensation, appeals of historical criminal convictions and provide full assistance with the Inquiry.

Whilst the Inquiry's work continues, my priority is to ensure that there is appropriate, meaningful compensation for victims. Post Office would not have the financial resources for this without Government and I welcome the funding support they are providing.

We are making substantial progress, with offers totalling more than £130 million, the vast majority of which are agreed and paid.

Past shortcomings must never be repeated. We are making significant changes to our culture and rebuilding trust to

We now have two Non-Executive Director Postmasters, elected by other Postmasters, on the Post Office Board to influence strategy and ensure the business's direction is rooted in the reality of Postmaster business experience. A current Postmaster has been appointed to a new Director role leading our day-to-day relationship with Postmasters.

Operational improvements have also been made, based on Postmaster and branch staff feedback, in every part of the business from initial appointment and training through to daily transactions and accounting. Whilst we recognise there is still much work to do, we have made significant progress.

I know that Post Office is changing for the better and that such past failings must never happen again. Post Office and our Postmasters remain at the heart of communities across the UK. We must put this right.

Post Office signs new contract with DVLA - message from Deputy CEO to Postmasters

11/7/2023

Share

Message from Owen Woodley, Deputy CEO at Post Office, to Postmasters announcing that Post Office has signed a new contract with DVLA:

I am pleased to announce that following intensive negotiations with DVLA, Post Office has now agreed and signed a new contract that allows Vehicle Tax and Ten-Year Renewal products to be sold in Post Offices until 31 March 2025.

Although the contract is for an initial term of 1 year from 31 March 2024 until 31 March 2025, we will meet with DVLA each year to discuss extending the contract which can run for a maximum of 3 years, until 31 March 2027.

The negotiations haven't been easy. Our aim throughout has been to ensure that Postmasters receive fair remuneration for DVLA transactions and that Post Office's associated costs for providing the services are covered. I'm pleased to let you know that we have been able to achieve this.

We had already extended our contract with DVLA earlier this year which resulted in improved remuneration for our Postmasters. This deal means that we will maintain this level of remuneration for Vehicle Tax and Ten Year Renewal transactions.

To ensure you are kept informed with the ongoing contract with DVLA, we commit to letting you know, in October each year, if extension periods are agreed. This will give you at least 6 months' notice of any extensions, or indeed if there is any risk of this contract exiting.

We recognise that this has been an extremely unsettling time and we want to thank you for everything you and the NFSP have done to highlight how important our Government Services products are to our customers, and the fantastic job you do in serving them.

The vital role that Post Office plays in providing in-person DVLA services in our branches has been a key element of these negotiations and we look forward to continue providing these services which are so important to you and our customers.
